

Colonization in Aus

Colonization began in 1788 when the First Fleet arrived in Sydney. This was the start of British settlement in Australia. Over time, more colonies were formed, and the population grew. However, this had a major negative impact on Indigenous Australians, including losing their land and population decline. These events shaped the development of modern Australia.

